Pay With a Can Pay WHAT You Can

For those who aren't able to pay full price for a ticket, Mustard Seed Theatre offers "Pay With a Can or Pay WHAT You Can" performances - a canned food item is exchanged for admission to the show and we distribute the food to local food pantries (Our helpers above are delivering food in December 2011.)

Since its beginning in 2007, Mustard Seed Theatre has been committed to making our professional theatre accessible to all. Our Pay with a Can performances are funded by donations from those of you who CAN give, allowing others to experience your gift of theatre.

During our 2013-2014 season, all Thursday night performances will be Pay With a Can/Pay WHAT You Can performances. If you or your business are interested in sponsoring one of these evenings, please contact Deanna Jent or Leslie Wobbe at the Mustard Seed Office.

Falling

by Deanna Jent

April 4 - 27, 2014

Fresh from its off-Broadway run, Falling returns with the original St. Louis cast. The New York Post writes: "This heartfelt and nuanced family drama is shot through with dark humor. Falling soars!" While Falling explores hard truths within a family dealing specifically with autism, the story is really about loving someone who is hard to love.

Thao's Library

September 5 - 15 , 2013

Written and performed by Elizabeth Van Meter, who takes us on her life-changing journey to help Thao, a disabled Vietnamese woman whose goal is to build a library for the children of her village. This show was originally presented as part of the "All For One Theatre Festival" in New York City in 2012. We are thrilled to bring this compelling story to our Mustard Seed Audience!
