"A truly impressive and moving film . . . marking the end of several years' hard work by Kemal Pervanić. Pretty Village is directed by David Evans and tells the harrowing story of the 1992 Kevljani massacre in Bosnia and its continuing effect on people's lives there. Kemal himself is a survivor of the notorious concentration camp Omarska, where among his guards were former neighbours and teachers."

— Susan Roberts, Bridging Arts

A former resident of Kevljani, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Kemal Pervanić is a filmmaker, writer, and activist. His book The Killing Days: My Journey through the Bosnian War, was published in 1999 by Blake Publishing (London). In addition to producing and narrating Pretty Village, Pervanić is founder of Most Mira— "Bridge of Peace"— a British and Bosnian charity working to encourage understanding and tolerance between young Bosnians of all ethnic backgrounds (www.mostmiraproject.org).
